ABSTRACT

This document contains the 1991-92 report on the Missouri public school system. Following an organizational chart of the State Board of Education and information on the State Board, part 1 presents highlights of education-related events that occurred during the 1991-92 school year. It contains an overview of state legislation that dealt with the following issues: financially stressed schools, the expansion of school boards, the expansion of the breakfast program, a minimum tax levy, the VIDEO program, student transportation, health insurance for public employees, and immunization. Information is also provided on outcomes of the "Math Attack" program, recent state court decisions, and an article on state budget cutbacks for education. Part 2 presents statewide statistics. Forty-six tables and two graphs offer information on the following: receipts and expenditures, tax levies and bonds, student transportation, enrollment and attendance, graduate rates and dropout data, teacher characteristics and salaries, curriculum, vocational education and rehabilitation, school services programs, and early childhood education. The third part contains four tables of local education agency statistics. (LMI)

Members of the General Assembly
State of Missouri

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The State Board of Education herewith submits its One Hundred Forty-third Report of the Public Schools of the State of Missouri. This report, prepared in compliance with Section 161.092, Missouri Revised Statutes, covers the school year ending June 30, 1992.

We hope the information contained in this report will be of interest and assistance to you as you consider the needs and major problems of the public schools of the State of Missouri.

Respectfully,

Gary M. Cunningham

The State Board of Education was established in its present form by the Missouri Constitution of 1945. The State Board of Education consists of eight lay citizens appointed by the Governor with advice and consent of the Senate. Article IX, Section 2(a) also states that no more than four members of the Board may belong to the same political party. State Board members are appointed for eight-year terms which are arranged so that only one term expires each year. The Board elects its own officers.

The responsibilities of the State Board of Education extend from preschool through postsecondary and adult education programs. These responsibilities include:

- Establishment of policies for the leadership, service and regulation of public education. These policies are administered by the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.
- Operation of the State School for the Blind and the State School for the Deaf.
- Operation of State Schools for Severely Handicapped Children.
- Classification of schools and certification of teachers.
- Administration of vocational education, vocational rehabilitation and veterans' education programs.
- Administration and supervision of programs under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 and other federal programs.
- Apportionment of state moneys.
- Publication of laws relating to schools.
- Collection and publication of information which reflects continuously the condition and management of the state's public schools.

PART I

Highlights of 1991-92

Money woes get worse for local school districts; General Assembly enacts "school bankruptcy" law.

The 1991-92 school year began with state education officials warning of a growing financial crisis in local school districts, and concern over the schools' financial plight mounted throughout the year. School districts across the state garnered headlines as they cut staff and salaries, reduced student activities and took other measures to balance their budgets. As a result, both the State Board of Education and the General Assembly took action before year's end to head off the threat of a school district's financial collapse.

In a report to the State Board of Education in September 1991, Commissioner of Education Robert E. Bartman said that as many as 50 of the state's school districts could be on the brink of insolvency before the end of the year.

"Districts have already cut professional staff, and school officials tell us the layoffs are going to increase. Class sizes are going up. A few districts are thinking about cutting days from this year's schedule. The news has rapidly gone from bad to worse all over the state," Bartman said in his September report.

The severe problems of 1991-92 stemmed primarily from two rounds of state budget cuts, which compounded the pressures already being experienced by many districts. During the previous year (1990-91), for example, state education officials found that more than 300 districts were spending their reserve funds to maintain programs and services. Many of these districts were hoping for increased state aid during 1991-92 to relieve some of their problems.

In late June of 1992, however, just before the beginning of the new fiscal year, Gov. John Ashcroft ordered $200 million in vetoes and withholdings of funds that the legislature had appropriated for 1991-92. Of that amount, $40.5 million was cut from basic Foundation Program funding for public schools. The cuts were caused primarily by the continuing slump in state revenues, which reflected the nationwide economic recession at that time.

Then, in early September of 1991, the state budget took another blow —a cut-

Bartman Calls for Overhaul of High School Standards

By 1996, all school districts in Missouri should eliminate the "general education track" for high school students, said Commissioner of Education Robert E. Bartman. Such action would force all students to choose between a college-prep or a vocationally oriented curriculum and would "ratchet up" the overall academic performance of Missouri's high schools.

Bartman made the proposal during his "state of the schools" address to about 1,000 public school officials who were attending the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education's annual school administrators conference on Aug. 5, 1991, in Jefferson City.

Between 40 and 50 percent of all high school students take a "general track" of high school courses, Bartman noted. As a result, they are not well-prepared for higher education or employment after high school. About one-third of all the students who take college-entry exams do not take any college-prep courses in high school, he added.

"Unfortunately, we already have a negative tracking system in our schools. We permit too many students to 'float.' They do just enough to get by and then are ill-prepared to be productive after high school. We need to remove the option of floating through," Bartman said in his speech.

The elimination of the so-called general track would have several benefits. While it might make schools drop some elective classes, it would force students to be more serious and thoughtful about their education, he said.

Bartman also proposed that local schools consider organizing "high school majors" and allowing students to take related courses in which they could develop "clusters" of skills in specific academic or occupational areas. A restructuring of high school studies could allow greater use of community sites for off-campus instruction and apprenticeship-type programs, he said.

"We have developed in our kids a lottery mentality — that success is related to the luck of the draw rather than preparation or effort. We need to 'ratchet up' the curriculum and make sure students understand that school is the most important work they have," Bartman said.

Bartman also called on business leaders to support efforts that will create a more rigorous climate in schools and communities across the state. He recommended that employers ask for students' transcripts before hiring and that they provide differential wages to reward students who perform well in school. Business leaders also can support education, he said, by limiting work hours for young people so that their schoolwork does not suffer.

back of about $71 million to provide additional funds for court-ordered payments in the Kansas City desegregation case. This surprise action sent a shock wave through many public school districts, which had already adopted budgets and employed staff for the year.

Together, the June and September budget actions reduced the funding level for public schools for 1991-92 by more than $80 million. These cutbacks primarily affected the Foundation Program, the main source of basic state aid to local schools, but also forced reductions in other state-funded programs. (See "Schools on the Ropes," page 17.)

"Although some may be forced to reduce staff immediately, districts will try to avoid laying off teachers until the end of the year. They don't want to disrupt classes and programs that have already started. They will try to absorb the latest [September] budget cuts from the state and hang on until next spring," said Dr. Terry Stewart, an assistant commissioner for the Department of Education, following the September report to the State Board of Education.

Stewart cited statistics from an August 1991 survey in which state education officials asked school superintendents to outline the cutbacks they planned to make for 1991-92. Less than half of the school districts responded to the survey, he noted, partly because they were reluctant to reveal the extent of their financial difficulties.

Though incomplete, the survey provided plenty of troubling signs. Seventy-five school districts reported cutbacks in professional staff; 42 districts said they had reduced class offerings, competitive sports and other extracurricular programs.

Forty-three districts reported that they would likely end the school year with a reserve balance of less than five percent in their main operating fund; more than 100 districts expected to have a balance of less than five percent in the teacher-salary fund at year's end.

One of the most troubling indicators, Stewart noted, was that officials of some of the state's large school districts indicated, privately, that they expected to end the 1991-92 school year with budget balances near zero.

"Larger districts generally maintain adequate reserves and are in the best position to absorb unexpected budget cuts. When these districts tell us they are in trouble, it means the situation is likely to be much worse in districts that lack reserve funds," Stewart said.

A Safety Net for Students

Throughout the year, as state education officials focused attention on schools' financial problems, they warned of the potential for a "worst-case scenario" — a school district becoming insolvent and being forced to suddenly close its doors. Such an event could leave students with no place to go.

In December 1991, the State Board of Education took action to head off this threat. During its Dec. 20 meeting, the Board approved proposed regulations designed to deal with a financial crisis. At the same time, officials of the Department of Education were working with Sen. Harold Caskey (D-Butler), chairman of the Senate Education Committee, and other legislative leaders to deal with the threat of "school bankruptcy."

The proposed policy approved by the Board in December was designed to strengthen the ability of the Department of Education and the State Board to intervene in the event of a financial emergency. Previously, there had been no state-level contingency plans and procedures for monitoring or assisting a school district with critical financial problems.

The proposed policy approved by the Board called for the commissioner of education to notify a local school district if the Department of Education determined the district was in financial danger. Under this policy, the school district would then be required to develop a formal plan for improving its condition and guaranteeing that services for students would not be interrupted. If a school district failed or refused to submit the required plan for state approval, the district could then be annexed to another district through action by the State Board. The proposed rules also defined specific criteria to be used in evaluating districts' financial condition.

"We will be in a better position to protect educational services for Missouri students," said Commissioner Bartman, following the Board's December action. The purpose of the policy, he said, "is not to put pressure on school districts but to create a safety net for students. We want to assure that districts are able to maintain acceptable services and the educational process is not disrupted. Under this new policy, I think we will be able to take action sooner to put districts on notice and work with them to develop effective contingency plans."

In the end, however, the proposed rules were not implemented. Instead, virtually all of the procedures recommended by the State Board were included in a bill that was enacted by the General Assembly. The law, known as Senate Bill 581, was enacted with an emergency clause, and it became effective when Gov. John Ashcroft signed the measure on April 17, 1992. (See "Summary of Legislation," page 11.) During its April meeting, the State Board of Education also voted to withdraw its proposed regulations.

Early on 1992, the State Board of Education took another step aimed at dealing with schools' financial problems. During its February 1992 meeting, the Board approved a proposed policy that would allow small school districts to share the services of a superintendent. The proposed regulation, which was given final approval in June, was designed to provide more flexibility and cost-saving options for small school districts.

The policy also amended existing rules to allow superintendents in small districts to have dual assignments and work as principals in their districts.

This policy allows districts with 25 or fewer professional staff members to share a top administrator. It also would permit any two districts, regardless of size, to share a superintendent for up to one year on a trial basis.

Although no school districts took advantage of this policy in 1992, the State Board's action illustrated the depth of concern that existed about districts' financial problems during 1991-92.

Districts Merge

The financial pressure on Missouri's public schools during the 1980s has been most severe for small school districts. Such districts typically lack the local tax base and financial reserves needed to sustain them through lean times. During 1991-92, the number of school districts in the state continued to drop as three small districts were forced to merge with other districts because of financial problems.

Effective July 1, 1991, the Knob Lick C-1 District (St. Francois County) and the Benton County R-X District merged with other districts. Both were elementary districts with 65 students or less. Knob Lick C-1 annexed to the Farmington R-VII District; Benton County R-X annexed to Warsaw R-IX. In January 1992, residents of the Fillmore C-1 District (Andrew County) voted to annex to the North Andrew County R-VI District. The Fillmore district had about 160 students. The annexation became effective at the end of the 1991-92 school year.

TEACHER OF THE YEAR • Earnestine Blakley, a third-grade teacher at Bessie Ellison Elementary School in St. Joseph, was Missouri's Teacher of the Year for 1991-92. Helping students develop healthy self-esteem and involving parents in education are priorities in Blakley's classroom. "I believe that students who feel worthwhile do worthwhile things," said Blakley, who has taught for 12 years, all in the St. Joseph district.

State Board Officers, New Members

Gary Cunningham, an attorney from Ladue, served as president of the State Board of Education during 1991-92; Susan Finke of Richmond, a former teacher and school board member, served as vice president.

Jacqueline Wellington, a St. Louis businesswoman, was appointed to the State Board of Education in November 1991 by Gov. John Ashcroft. Mrs. Wellington replaced Cynthia Thompson, who was appointed to the University of Missouri Board of Curators in January 1991.

Peter Herschend of Branson was appointed to the State Board in December 1991. Herschend, co-owner and executive vice president of the Silver Dollar City family entertainment park, replaced Roseann Bentley, whose term expired in July 1991.

Voters Reject Ambitious Education Reform and Tax Measure

At the general election on Nov. 5, 1991, Missouri voters overwhelmingly defeated "Proposition B," a tax-increase and school-reform plan developed by legislators and Gov. Ashcroft. The proposal was defeated in the statewide election by a 2-1 margin.

The measure included proposed tax increases that would have provided an estimated $190 million in new state funding for public schools, $190 million in new state aid for higher education, plus $5 million for job development and training programs. It also included an array of reform and accountability provisions affecting public schools and higher education institutions.

Commenting on the measure's defeat, Commissioner Bartman said, "My deepest concern is that the defeat of Proposition B will widen the chasm between the 'haves and have nots' in Missouri's school system. It is already clear that recent budget cuts will have disparate effects on local schools. Some districts will be hurt badly and may be forced to take drastic measures to keep their doors open. In these districts, today's austerity measures may affect the quality of education for years to come.

"On the other hand, some school districts have been affected minimally by the state's budget crunch. These districts either have enough local wealth or financial reserves to ride out the current storm.

"These disparities in resources have the potential to create two classes of learners in Missouri — those who are advantaged and those who are not. We have an obligation to provide quality education for all of our young citizens — not just those who happen to live in relatively wealthy communities and not just during the times between recessions," said Bartman.

State Board Endorses National Goals

The State Board of Education formally endorsed the National Education Goals on Sept. 20, 1991.

The national goals set targets for America's students and schools to achieve by the year 2000. The goals were initially developed during an "education summit meeting" of the nation's governors in the fall of 1989. President George Bush formally announced the National Education Goals during his 1990 State of the Union address. The goals are:

1. By the year 2000, all children in America will start school ready to learn.

2. By the year 2000, the high school graduation rate will increase to at least 90 percent.

3. By the year 2000, American students will leave grades 4, 8 and 12 having demonstrated competency in challenging subject matter including English, mathematics, science, history, and geography; and every school in America will ensure that all students learn to use their minds well, so they may be prepared for responsible citizenship, further learning, and productive employment in our modern economy.

4. By the year 2000, U.S. students will be first in the world in science and mathematics achievement.

5. By the year 2000, every adult American will be literate and will possess the knowledge and skills necessary to compete in a global economy and exercise the rights and responsibilities of citizenship.

6. By the year 2000, every school in America will be free of drugs and violence and will offer a disciplined environment conducive to learning.

"Missouri is on track with the National Education Goals," said Commissioner Bartman, following the State Board's endorsement. He pointed out that the recommendations included in the State Board of Education's special report, Missourians Prepared — Success for Every Student, published in July 1990, are nearly identical to the National Education Goals.

Educators, Citizens and Business Leaders Discuss School Reform

During September and October of 1991, the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education sponsored its annual series of Regional Educational Conferences for citizens and educators. Ten "town hall" meetings were held at schools across the state; the theme of the conferences was "Missourians Prepared: Meeting the Educational Demands of the 1990s."

The conferences focused on the State Board of Education's special report, Missourians Prepared — Success for Every Student, and the Board's recommendations for school reform during the 1990s. About 3,000 students, parents, teachers,

SUMMARY OF LEGISLATION

Here is a summary of the major education-related measures enacted by the 86th Missouri General Assembly (second regular session) and signed by Gov. John Ashcroft in 1992.

1. Financially Stressed Schools. Because of the financial problems facing many school districts and the prospect that some districts might "go bankrupt" and be forced to close suddenly, the State Board of Education urged lawmakers to establish new procedures for handling such situations. As a result, legislators moved quickly in 1992 to enact Senate Bill 581. Previously, there was no state-level authority for dealing with a financial crisis in a school district.

If a school district becomes insolvent and unable to operate, this law authorizes the State Board of Education to assign students from that district to an adjacent district or districts. The law also requires the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education to annually identify "financially stressed" school districts, based on several criteria included in the law. Districts that are determined to be in weak financial condition must prepare formal plans for resolving their problems, and these plans must be submitted to state education officials.

SB 581 also gives districts with severe financial problems the option to exempt themselves from Proposition C rollback requirements for two years. Districts that use this option, however, may not increase their total spending for salaries for two years. (Sections 161.520-161.527, RSMo.)

(Note: SB 581 was enacted with an emergency clause, and it took effect in April 1992. Four months later the law was applied for the first time. In August 1992, the board of education of the Cedar Creek R-VII School District (Taney County) voted to close due to financial problems and requested that the State Board of Education assign its students to the nearby Forsyth School District. On Thursday, Aug. 27, 1992, the State Board of Education voted to combine the two districts. Students from the Cedar Creek district began attending school at Forsyth on the following Monday.)

2. School Boards Expand. SB 581 also included a provision, unrelated to financial concerns, affecting nearly every Missouri school district. Effective with local school board elections in 1993, all six-member boards will be expanded to seven members. (The St. Louis, Kansas City and North Kansas City districts already had boards of education larger than six members.)

3. School Breakfast. The legislature approved "The Hunger Relief Act" (Senate Bill 449) in an effort to make school breakfast more widely available in Missouri schools. Beginning in 1993-94, the law requires all public school buildings to offer a breakfast program if 35 percent or more of the students enrolled are eligible for free or reduced-price meals.

Some education groups opposed this measure because it mandated new services at a time when many school districts were reducing staff and other programs. Under the compromise bill that was enacted, a district may be exempted from the breakfast requirement if the board of education votes to request a waiver from the State Board of Education. The waiver is valid for up to three years, and districts may vote to extend this exemption.

SB 449 also requires the operation of at least one summer food service program in areas of the state where 50 percent or more of the children are eligible for free or reduced-price school lunches and where more than 40 children gather at one site. At least one "service institution" (school district, college, municipality, community group, etc.) in the area will have to operate the summer feeding program, serving meals (breakfast and lunch, if practical) to all children. This program will be administered by the Missouri Department of Health. Local school boards also may vote to obtain a waiver from participating in this program. (Sections 191.800-191.805, RSMo.)

4. Minimum Tax Levy. Beginning in 1993-94, House Bill 1478 requires every Missouri school district to have an adjusted operating tax levy of at least $2 in order to qualify for increases in basic state aid. The base level is defined as the amount of "minimum guarantee" aid that a district received, on a per-pupil basis, during 1990-91. In addition, after Jan. 1, 1993, school districts will not be required to roll back tax levies to less than $2 because of Proposition C. Districts with an unadjusted operating tax rate of less than $2 will not be required to take any Proposition C rollback under this law. (Section 163.021 and 164.013, RSMo.)

5. VIDEO Program. Senate Bill 483 extended the Video Instructional Development and Educational Opportunity (VIDEO) program until Dec. 31, 1995. Created by the legislature in 1988, the VIDEO program provides grants to help schools and colleges acquire telecommunications equipment and services. Without SB 483, the state sales tax on videotape rentals — the revenue source created to fund the VIDEO program — would have expired at the end of 1993. (Section 170.250, RSMo.)

6. Pupil Transportation. A provision of House Bill 1794 provides that vehicles such as cars or vans, when owned by or operated under contract to local school districts, may be used to transport the number of passengers that such vehicles are designed to carry. In effect, the number of seat belts in the vehicle is the determining factor. Previous law limited the use of such vehicles, regardless of size, to transporting four or fewer students. (Section 304.060, RSMo.)

local school officials, community leaders and legislators participated in the meetings.

In conjunction with the conferences, members of the State Board and top state education officials also conducted a series of Education-Business Roundtable meetings across the state; 26 meetings were held with selected business and education leaders. These meetings were informal sessions designed to promote improved dialogue between private-sector leaders and education officials.

The roundtable sessions also focused on key school-reform topics and the issues addressed by the State Board in Missourians Prepared. Business leaders were asked to become actively involved in the debate about educational reform, both at the local and state levels. As a follow-up to the roundtable meetings, state education officials also invited local business leaders to serve on a variety of state advisory committees.

Graduation Rate Continues Downward Trend

The graduation rate among Missouri students dropped in 1991 to 72.5 percent, down .5 percent from the year before. This decline marked the sixth consecutive year that the graduation rate declined in the state's public high schools.

"We've got to figure out why the dropout rate is increasing among Missouri students and find ways to reverse this trend," Commissioner Bartman told the State Board of Education in a March 1992 report. "At the national, state and local levels we have become much more aware of the dropout problem. We have tried to focus on the needs of at-risk youth, and many school districts have launched programs to help reduce the dropout rate. Still, we are losing ground."

The graduation rate is based on the number of students who graduate compared with the number who entered the ninth grade four years earlier. The latest figure means that about 17,800 of the students who started high school in 1988 did not graduate with their class in 1991. Nationally, the high school completion rate averages about 75 percent.

While the lowest graduation rates usually are found in urban schools, Bartman stressed that high dropout rates are not just an urban problem. "We have a number of out-state communities where the graduation rate is in the 50 to 60 percent range."

A new state law, which took effect Jan. 1, 1991, requires all high schools in Missouri — public and private — to report the names of known dropouts to the "Literacy Hotline" operated by the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education. The new dropout-reporting system provides state education officials with another way to gauge the state's dropout problem and allows state and local adult education programs to provide dropouts with information about Adult Basic Education and GED classes.

"Schools cannot solve the dropout problem by themselves," Bartman stressed. "Community expectations, family support and the community's commitment to education influence students' motivation and desire to stay in school. School, community and business leaders are going to have to work together if we expect to turn this trend around and reach our goal of a 90 percent graduation rate by the end of this decade."

Special Education Services Extended to Preschoolers

Nearly 3,700 preschool-age children with disabilities benefited from special education services provided by Missouri school districts in 1991-92. For about 40 percent of these children, this was the first year that special education was available through their public schools.

Recent federal requirements and a 1990 state law required Missouri districts to provide special education programs for 3- and 4-year-olds beginning in the fall of 1991. Under the state's original funding plan, local districts were required to pay for 10 percent of the program, with state and federal funds covering the balance. A Missouri Supreme Court ruling late in the year, however, barred enforcement of the program mandate until state funds were appropriated to eliminate any cost to local districts. (See "Supreme Court Rules on Budget Cuts and 'Hancock' Restrictions," page 15.)

Despite the uncertainty caused by the lawsuit, state education officials were pleased with the start-up of early childhood special education programs.

"This was the most significant expansion of special education services in public schools since the mid-1970s," said John Allan, assistant commissioner of the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education. "Local school districts did a good job of meeting this new mandate at a time when they are being squeezed, financially, in so many areas. By providing services now, before these children reach kindergarten age, we have a chance to make a big difference in their lives and to save a great deal of money down the road."

State officials estimate that as many as 7,500 children in Missouri, ages 3 and 4, could be eligible for early childhood special education. Before the 1991-92 school year, about 100 districts in the state voluntarily provided special education for about 1,300 such children.

7. Health Insurance. House Bill 1574 is a potentially significant measure providing for the creation of a consolidated health insurance program for state workers and employees of other political subdivisions in Missouri. Starting in January 1994, school districts will have the option of joining the statewide health insurance program for public employees. The goal of this measure is to help control health insurance costs by expanding the pool of covered workers. (Sections 103.003-103.175, RSMo.)

8. Immunization. Senate Bill 611 added mumps to the list of contagious diseases against which children must be immunized before they may attend school. Under previous law, children could remain in school up to 30 days without their required immunizations; SB 611 reduced this period to 15 days. (Section 167.181, RSMo.)

The "Math Attack" Expands

"I am enjoying this year! The 'fun stuff' leads to discovery of mathematics. Computation is being used instead of just practiced."

"Teaching is fun again! Kids are involved. Discipline problems are rare. Work is going home...."

"One student spent three hours on the 10-digit problem last night and wouldn't even stop to eat supper."

The teachers who made these enthusiastic comments are on the front lines of Missouri's Math Attack — a campaign to upgrade middle-school mathematics instruction and to improve math achievement statewide.

Officially known as the Missouri Mathematics Initiative, the project was launched by the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education during the 1990-91 school year. Twelve Missouri school districts conducted a pilot project in seventh grade, a critical turning point in mathematics instruction.

Results of the pilot project were so favorable that the Math Attack was expanded to 47 school districts during 1991-92. In addition, a similar pilot project for eighth grade was started in 10 school districts.

In both projects, the Math Attack emphasizes an active, hands-on approach to math instruction, with far less reliance on textbooks. These approaches are intended to develop students' problem-solving skills and their ability to apply math and problem-solving strategies in real-life situations.

State education officials organized the "attack" because of concern about math proficiency among Missouri students, particularly at the middle school level.

"National test results clearly show that American students at the middle school level aren't getting the math skills they need to be competitive," said Commissioner Bartman. "Too often, the junior high curriculum just 'recycles' the math that most students have already learned. The result is that too many kids get bored, develop negative attitudes about math and don't learn advanced skills."

Evaluation of the seventh-grade pilot project showed that students' computation skills were as good or better than those of students taught by traditional methods. In addition, their attitudes about math were more positive, their problem-solving skills were more advanced, and they showed more persistence in working on complex problems.

"In short, the students had more fun and learned more math," said Vena Long, math consultant for the Department and project coordinator.

In July 1991, the Department sponsored a two-week seminar and training session at the College of the Ozarks for teachers and principals involved in the eighth-grade project. Dr. Larry Campbell, then math professor at the college and president of the Missouri Council of Teachers of Mathematics, serves as consultant for the project.

While incorporating many of the same goals and strategies as the seventh-grade project, the eighth-grade project is focusing on two specific questions: How can algebra become part of the typical eighth-grade curriculum for all students? How can technology be used most effectively to improve math instruction and learning?

Commissioner Bartman said he is confident that the two projects will show that it is possible for individual schools to produce "rapid and substantial gains" in math achievement. In addition, he was hopeful that lessons learned in the pilot projects will spread quickly to other schools and districts.

"The Math Attack will continue in the future," Bartman said. "We're going to concentrate on developing innovative curriculum, raising teachers' expectations, applying new technology, and providing coordinated inservice training so that teachers can put new ideas into practice. Our long-term goal is to give many more students the skills and confidence they need to succeed in advanced math."

Debbie Mummert, a seventh-grade teacher in Jefferson City, was one of the first recruits for the Missouri Math Attack. Here, she helps a student solve a mystery — one of the unconventional problems that students learn to tackle.

Summer School Programs Growing

The number of Missouri students attending summer school has risen sharply during the past four years as local districts have expanded summer programs.

Commissioner Bartman attributed the growth to a shift in the focus of summer school programs. "Traditionally, we operated summer schools for high school students who had to make up credits or needed remedial help. That's no longer the case. More and more districts are using summer schools to expand academic and enrichment opportunities for all students."

Bartman and the State Board of Education have been advocating a longer school year for Missouri's public schools. Both support innovative summer programs as a way of extending learning time for more children.

School districts also have had a financial incentive to expand their summer offerings since 1988 when a state law doubled the state aid available to districts for summer school students.

According to the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, 136 school districts offered summer programs during 1991, serving nearly 60,000 students. In 1988, only 102 districts offered summer programs that served about 43,700 students.

"The growth of summer school programs proves that teachers and students are willing to take advantage of extended learning time. These programs are fun and challenging for students, and they allow teachers to try out new ideas and methods," Bartman said after visiting several summer programs during June and July 1991.

PAT Remains Effective Despite Rapid Growth

A follow-up study of Missouri's Parents as Teachers program showed that local school districts maintained high-quality services for families with young children even though the program expanded rapidly in recent years.

Results of this "second wave" study confirmed earlier research about the PAT program's benefits for young children (birth to age 3) and their parents. The study also showed that the program reduces many so-called "risk factors" that can affect all types of families during the critical preschool years.

The study results were announced in July 1991 by U.S. Sen. Christopher S. "Kit" Bond and state education officials. Bond, who expanded the PAT program statewide when he was governor of Missouri, has introduced legislation in the Senate to expand PAT nationwide with federal "seed" money.

During the 1990-91 school year, PAT provided parent education and family support services to nearly 60,000 families, or about 30 percent of the Missouri families with children under age 3. Services included home visits by specially trained parent educators, health and developmental screening for children and group meetings for parents. Family participation in the state-funded program is voluntary.

The "second wave" study was designed to assess the impact of PAT after 1986-87, when the program, which began as a carefully controlled pilot project in 1981, became a statewide initiative involving all school districts. The "second wave" study was funded by the Ford Foundation and conducted by Research & Training Associates Inc., an independent firm in Overland Park, Kan. The study sample included about 400 families who enrolled in the PAT program during 1986-87 and who continued in the program until their children reached age 3. The families represented 37 school districts across the state.

Following are some of the most significant study findings:

- At age 3, the children in this study scored significantly above national norms on measures of school-related achievement, confirming the results of the original PAT pilot project.
- Parents in nearly all types of families showed significant gains in knowledge about child development and child-rearing practices.
- More than half of the children observed to have delays in development, including language development, overcame these delays by age 3.
- More than half of the families in the study had at least one characteristic of "observed" risk, such as poor coping skills and family stress, poor parent-child communication and child developmental delay, or child illnesses. The most frequent "observed" risk was parents' difficulty in coping with outside, family, and child-related sources of stress. One out of three families were observed to be under undue stress.
- All types of parents actively participated in the PAT program during the three-year study period. Eighty-three percent of all participants rated their home visits as "very helpful."

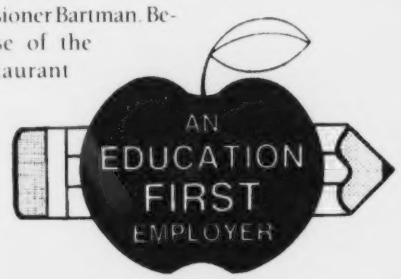
Missouri's Parents as Teachers program has been recognized since the mid-1980s as a highly successful method of early parent education. Programs based on the PAT model are now operating at more than 250 sites across the nation, in Australia and in England.

Missouri Restaurant Owners Put "Education First"

In April of 1992, the Missouri Restaurant Association, which represents 3,500 businesses statewide, kicked off a program called "Education First." Restaurant owners participating in the program pledged to recognize that education is a student's most important "job."

The Restaurant Association and the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education developed the program, with support from the Missouri Association of Secondary School Principals and Gov. John Ashcroft.

"If we are going to make significant improvement in high school performance across Missouri, it will be partly because employers are willing to take strong action to support the academic mission of our schools," said Commissioner Bartman. Because of the Restaurant



Association's initiative, he added, "We now have a major partner who will help us bring a strong message to communities and students that success in high school is related to success outside of high school."

The primary objectives of Education First are to make schoolwork a top priority for student employees and to communicate the value of the work experience.

MRA members who participate in the program must adhere to and display the official Education First code of employer standards. These standards include encouraging scholastic success as well as job success and keeping lines of communication open between the employer, student, family and school.

One way employers promote effective communication is by sending letters to parents and school officials, inviting them to call if they believe a student's academic performance is being adversely affected by his or her part-time job. The employer then makes necessary adjustments to the student's work schedule.

Education First employers also will share the program's goals with new employees, communicate job requirements and schedules to students and parents, and provide a positive work environment.

"MRA's Education First campaign will make employers more sensitive to the educational responsibilities of young employees. It will encourage parents and schools to meet their responsibilities when a young person is not meeting academic duties. By assuring communication, all parties can work together," said George Cascone, a Kansas City restaurant owner and chairman of the association's education committee.

Students' Scores Improve on 1992 MMAT Exams

Students' scores on the 1992 Missouri Mastery and Achievement Tests generally improved, rebounding from the decline that occurred in 1991.

According to Commissioner Bartman, average scores for secondary-level students (grades 7-10) either held steady or

Supreme Court Rules on Budget Cuts and "Hancock" Restrictions

The Missouri Supreme Court issued two decisions in 1992 in cases involving the governor's authority to reduce funding for local school districts and the state's power to require school districts to provide new services for children.

The first case, Sikeston R-I School District v. Ashcroft, was decided by the Supreme Court on March 10, 1992.

In September of 1991, Gov. John Ashcroft ordered reductions in the state budget because of shortfalls in state revenue and because the state had been ordered to pay additional costs for capital improvements in the Kansas City desegregation program. This action by the governor caused a reduction of more than $80 million in Foundation Program funding for local schools and in several state-funded educational programs. The Sikeston School District filed suit, contending that the governor did not have constitutional authority to reduce appropriations for public schools.

In this case, the Cole County Circuit Court had ruled that state-imposed budget cuts due to shortfalls in revenue were appropriate but that cutbacks related to the court-ordered desegregation program were not permitted by the constitution. The Supreme Court affirmed the circuit court's decision concerning withholdings caused by revenue shortfalls but reversed the lower court's ruling related to desegregation costs.

The Supreme Court held that desegregation costs were part of the state's expenditures for public schools and, therefore, that the governor's withholding did not constitute the reduction of an appropriation that had been approved by the legislature for the public schools. At the time the state spending cuts were made, court-ordered payments for desegregation costs were not included in the state's regular appropriations.

"Hancock" Restrictions Affirmed

On June 23, 1992, the Supreme Court ruled in an important case concerning a state requirement that school districts provide new services. The case was Rolla 31 School District v. State of Missouri.

In 1990, the Missouri Legislature enacted a law requiring local school districts to provide education for eligible 3- and 4-year-olds with disabilities. This law, which became effective for the 1991-92 school year, was enacted to comply with a federal special education mandate. School districts were required to cover about 10 percent of the cost of these programs, state funds covered up to 67 percent, and federal funds covered the balance. Some funds from the Foundation Program were set aside by the legislature to help pay for the new services.

The Rolla School District sued the state, contending that the law violated Article X, Section 21 of the Missouri Constitution — the so-called "Hancock Amendment." This provision of the constitution requires the state to pay the cost of new programs that it mandates.

A circuit court ruling held that the transfer of Foundation Program funds did not violate the Hancock Amendment but that the state's requirement for school districts to pay for part of the mandated services did constitute a violation. Both the school district and the state appealed this decision to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court upheld the circuit court decision on all counts and barred enforcement of the special education mandate until state funds could cover the entire cost of the program in local school districts.

OFF TO A GOOD START • During 1991-92, nearly half of Missouri's school districts participated in the federally funded School Breakfast Program. In recent years, state education officials have urged districts to take advantage of the breakfast program because of its benefits for students (improved attendance, fewer behavior problems, improved academic performance), and the number of schools participating has increased rapidly. During 1991-92, there were 1,102 public schools in 308 local school districts offering breakfast, compared with only 443 schools during 1986-87. Forty private schools also took part in the program. The students shown here are enjoying their breakfast — and the chance to visit with friends before school — at Parkade Elementary School in Columbia.

In the spring of 1992, the Missouri Legislature also enacted "The Hunger Relief Act," a measure that is intended to expand the breakfast program further, beginning with the 1993-94 school year. Under this law, schools will be required to offer breakfast if 35 percent or more of the children qualify for free or reduced-price meals — unless the local board of education requests an exemption from the requirement. (See "Summary of Legislation," page 11.)

showed a "healthy increase" this year in all subjects tested.

Average state scores declined slightly in three areas at the elementary level (grades 2-6), but state officials believe these results probably were caused by the use of revised exams this year in the elementary grades. Overall, the elementary scores improved or did not change in 15 of the 18 areas tested.

"Elementary students generally score higher on the MMAT than older students, so I'm encouraged by the improved performance this year in grades 7-10. In addition, we are glad to see that last year's decline in scores was not the beginning of a trend," Bartman said.

"However," he emphasized, "we still have a long way to go in many areas before we can be satisfied with our students' performance. In many areas, our students are barely mastering half of the objectives for their grade level. Our goal is for nearly all students to be able to master every objective included in the MMAT."

About 450,000 public school students in grades 2-10 took the state-mandated tests in April 1992. The average state scores are based on the results of sample testing conducted by the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education. Data from the annual sample testing are used to assess statewide trends and general academic performance. About 5,000 students at each of the nine grade levels were included in the 1992 sample.

First used in 1987, the MMAT covers state-defined "key skills" in reading and English, math, science and social studies/civics. The exams for grade 2 cover only reading and math skills.

Each key skill is tested by four multiple-choice items. To show "mastery" of the key skills, students must answer three out of four items correctly for each objective.

Elementary Schools Honored in New "Gold Star" Program

Ten Missouri elementary schools were recognized as "Gold Star Schools" of Missouri for 1991-92.

The Gold Star awards program was developed in 1991 to honor public schools for exemplary performance and achievements. Sponsored by the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education and Mercantile Bancorporation Inc. of St. Louis, the Gold Star program replaced the U.S. Department of Education's Blue Ribbon Schools recognition program, which was suspended for the 1991-92 school year.

Missouri's 1991-92 Gold Star Schools were

- Bellerive Elementary, Parkway School District
- Branson Primary, Branson School District
- Ellisville Elementary, Rockwood School District
- Knob Noster Elementary, Knob Noster School District
- James Lewis Elementary, Blue Springs School District
- Leland O. Mills Elementary, School of the Osage School District
- Midway Heights Elementary, Columbia School District
- Old Bonhomme Elementary, Ladue School District
- River Bend Elementary, Parkway School District
- Wedgwood Elementary, Ferguson-Florissant School District

The winners were selected by a state-level review panel, which evaluated the applicant schools' test scores, innovative teaching programs, levels of parental and community involvement, curriculum and other performance-oriented criteria.

Schools on the Ropes

by Robert E. Bartman
Commissioner of Education

As a result of unprecedented cuts this year in state funding, it now appears certain that many Missouri school districts will absorb a "direct hit" in their instructional programs during the 1991-92 school year.

It is too early to assess the full impact that the state-imposed cutbacks will have because many districts are still struggling to adjust their budgets. Without exaggeration, though, I can say that the financial outlook for 1991-92 is grim — and perhaps even worse for next year. For example:

1. Two small school districts merged with neighbors this summer and closed, largely because of financial pressures.

2. At least 75 school districts have cut at least 225 professional staff positions for this school year. These numbers are based on confirmed reports from about half of the school districts in the state; I expect the actual number of staff reductions to be greater before the year ends.

This is what I mean by a "direct hit." Most school districts have already cut spending for supplies, equipment, travel and support services. Now, they are being forced to cut teachers, a step that leads directly to larger classes and reduced course offerings.

3. Based on data the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education collected during the summer and on informal reports from school officials, it seems possible that approximately 50 school districts could be, literally, on the brink of collapse by the end of this school year. Some school board members and superintendents are talking seriously (though not publicly) about the prospect of schools going bankrupt.

4. A few school districts are resorting to excessive, imprudent borrowing to ride out the current storm.

5. Sixteen school districts started the last school year (1990-91) with budget deficits. While most had relatively small deficits, it is technically illegal for a Missouri school district to operate "in the red." While these districts took steps to remedy their problems (including passing local tax increases), I fear some of these already-fragile districts could be "forced to the ropes" by the impact of the state's budget problems.

No Warning

More than $80 million in planned spending for education was slashed from the state's budget for 1991-92. Many school districts will be forced either to make up for these reductions with local funds or to cut staff and services. The state's austerity measures include:

- Substantial cuts in basic state aid through the Foundation Program. First, the General Assembly appropriated no increase in Foundation Program funding for this year. In late June, a total of $200 million was vetoed or withheld from state spending for this year. Of that amount, $40.5 million will come from the Foundation Program during the second half of this school year.

Then, on Sept. 5, 1991, with the school year barely started, state officials announced that another $71 million in spending cuts would be needed to meet unexpected court-ordered payments in the Kansas City desegregation case. Although the state is appealing these costs, nearly half of this amount — $34.5 million — is likely to be taken from Foundation Program aid.

Together, these two actions would mean a reduction of $75 million in basic state support that school districts were expecting to receive during 1991-92.

- The $13 million appropriation for the Parents as Teachers program was cut by $1.9 million — a 15 percent reduction statewide.
- All funding for the Tuition Reimbursement program, about $829,000, was eliminated.
- The popular Incentives for School Excellence grant program was slashed by $3.5 million, from $4 million last year to $500,000 this year.
- Funding for two other programs created by the Excellence in Education Act of 1985 — professional development activities for teachers and scholarships for prospective teachers — was cut by more than $500,000.
- Slightly over $1 million was cut from vocational education funding.
- Nearly $3 million was cut from the budget for sheltered workshops and vocational rehabilitation, programs that serve Missouri's disabled citizens.

To the extent possible, school districts are tightening their own budgets to deal with these state-level reductions during the current school year. Without additional resources, however, the most serious damage may not occur until school districts begin planning their budgets for 1992-93.

We must not shrug off these budget cuts as a short-term unpleasantry. If the funding situation does not improve quickly, the school districts forced to make deep cuts could take years to recover. We cannot afford such damage to our children's education.

SUMMARY OF COURSES OFFERED IN SUBJECT MATTER FIELDS

Number of Course Titles: There is a listing of course titles for each major area published each year (see Table 36). This number is the aggregate of that listing by area.

Duplicated Count of Students: If a student is enrolled in more than one course in a major area, the student will be counted for each course.

Percent of 9-12 Students Enrolled: This is a ratio of students enrolled in the major areas divided by state fall enrollment for 9-12 grades. The comparison of years shows activities of areas.

C. MISSOURI SCHOOL TRUST FUNDS

Section 162.790 (5) RSMo., authorizes the State Board of Education to accept grants, gifts, donations, or bequests for the use of the Missouri Schools for the Blind, for the Deaf, and for the Handicapped Children to deposit same in the Schools' Trust Fund in the State Treasury, or to invest such funds in stocks, bonds, deeds of trust, or any other investment securities in the amounts and in the proportions that the State Board of Education prudently selects.

The act further provides that "moneys in the School for the Blind Trust Fund or in the School for the Deaf Trust Fund or the School for the Handicapped Children Trust Fund shall not be appropriated for the support of the schools in lieu of general state revenues but shall be appropriated only for the purpose of carrying out the object for which the grant, gift, donation, devise or bequest was made," as recommended by the State Board of Education.

EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION

The 1984 Early Childhood Development Act (ECDA) authorizes local school districts to provide annual screening and parent education to families with preschool-aged children. Offered voluntarily and gratuitously to parents, these services are designed to detect and minimize problems that can interfere with children's growth and development and to support parents in their "teaching" role.

A. Screening Results - ECDA
1991-92

Years of Age	Number Actually Screened	Possible Problems Identified
		Developmental		Vision		Hearing		Physical
1 and 2	42,964	3,932	(9.1%)	812	(1.8%)	2,740	(6.3%)	1,212	(2.8%)
3 and 4	54,504	13,276	(24.3%)	2,492	(4.5%)	5,843	(10.7%)	1,892	(3.4%)
Totals	97,450	17,208	(17.7%)	3,304	(3.3%)	8,583	(8.8%)	3,104	(3.1%)

Parent education services are available on an ongoing basis from the third trimester of pregnancy to kindergarten entry. Grouped by developmental stages of their children, parents gather regularly to share parenting experiences and to receive developmental information. Periodic home visits are delivered by parent educators with varying backgrounds; all are required to successfully complete program training. Drop-in play groups, toy and book lending libraries, "warm" lines, newsletters, and information and referral networks are services that meet the varying needs of families.
